RECRUITS FOR THE ARMY.

Enlistment in the Service of Uncle Sam.

Fifteen recruiting stations are maintained, two in New York city, one each in Albany, Buffalo, Boston, Washington and other cities, the farthest western one being at Denver. In New York applicants are received for cavalry and infantry. There are three great depots where the newly enlisted men go through their training. One at St. Louis, is devoted to cavalry; the other two, at Columbus, O., and Davis Island, N. Y., prepare the recruits for artillery and infantry service. Davis Island is the "principal depot."

Most young men have an idea that it would be perfectly easy for them to become soldiers if they should wish to do so, but when they look into the requirements they will not seem so easy. Suppose a man wishes to enlist. In the first place he must go to the recruiting office, let us say at Front street, New York, down by the docks, crowded with steamers and ships.
He mounts a crooked flight of wooden steps to the second story of a small, old fashioned building, and opening the door, finds himself in the presence of a captain and a sergeant seated at desks. There he must submit to a prescribed routine.

Every applicant first fills out a little blank form, giving his name, age, and other facts regarding himself. Only men between 18 and 35 can be taken. Then he walks down a corridor, and into a room where he is weighed. If he weighs over 150 pounds he is at once rejected. If not, he steps into an adjoining apartment and takes a bath. Then he is escorted, fresh from his bath and without a stitch of clothing on him, up a back flight of stairs to a room where the examining surgeon and a private soldier are on duty. The surgeon examines him carefully, makes him kneel to test his leg joints, swing his arms, expand and contract his chest.

The surgeon also thumps the candidate's chest, listens to his breathing and the beating of his heart; turns up his feet, and scans the soles and toes for any trace of warts or corns; looks at his teeth, rigidly tests his sight, hearing and spine; and asks him a long list of questions as to whether he ever had any illness, and what kind of illness, whether he has ever been hurt on the head, arms or legs; and if his parents or brothers and sisters have died, what was the cause of their death.

The candidate must also state whether he uses intoxicating liquors, and if so, to what extent, and must mention any injuries or surgical operations he has undergone; especially burns, cuts and severe bruises. In fact, he is as carefully scrutinized as if he were a horse offered for sale.

Then he is given a Springfield rifle to handle, cock and uncock; and the joints of his fingers and thumbs are tested, his wrists are inspected. If he goes through all these tests he is accepted and enrolled, and is lodged and boarded at government expense in the recruiting station for two or three days, until he can be sent by boat to Davis Island, at the head of New York harbor, on Long Island sound.

If, however, he fails to read the eyesight cards across the room, or is at all deaf, or is guilty of corns, or has any one among the long list of proscribed defects, he cannot pass. During three months 404 applicants came to one of the New York stations, but only sixteen of them were accepted; that is, not much more than one-seventh of the whole number.— G. P. Lathrop in Youth's Companion.

Buying Diamonds.

Persons who wish to part with diamonds which they have held for some years almost always return to the party from whom they originally bought them. They are not infrequently surprised to find that the dealer has enough of that certain grade or size in his possession, and for the time being is not a purchaser. As a recent instance of this, a fancier had purchased a number of the largest and most expensive diamonds in America, giving special orders for them. The price paid was therefore necessarily higher than if he had purchased had not been forced. When he wished to part with them he thought the dealer should buy back all the gems. But no one would expect him to do so, and he thereby considered as a lost sale.

But in many cases the mounting of a diamond and other precious stones is a considerable item in the cost price, especially when the stones themselves are of small value. In buying back such a mounting, jewelers always take into account the cost of the workmanship, and hence many are disappointed when they expect for a piece of jewelry on parting with it only one-third or one-fifth of its original cost.—New York Mail and Express.

Climate of the Congo.

Would that I could describe the picturesque scenes of the Congo river and country. The evergreen bluffs of the mighty river and the gigantic peaks of the mountainous valley are truly grand. I arrived at the close of the rainy season, and therefore enjoyed the cold season first. We are expecting rains now within the next ten days. This is our spring time. It is beginning to get very warm. Two days ago it was 98 degrees. Fahrenheit in the shade.
It seems so strange to see the trees putting out fresh leaves and the flowers blooming when there has been no rain for five months; not even a shower. What can it possibly be that steals away the vital powers of foreigners in this delightful climate, save that it is the excessive growth and decay of vegetation? This I think poisons the air. There is no other way, it seems to me, of accounting for the death of foreigners. I think if the country is ever cleared up, the climate will be even superior to that of Florida.
I have been as well as I would have been at home.—Congo Missionary in Christian Recorder.

How to Treat Frost Bites.

I have recently treated several people for frozen hands and feet. In one or two cases I have found it very difficult to treat them on account of their plunging their frozen members in hot water or holding them in close proximity to a red hot stove.
The best possible way to draw out the cold from frozen parts is to plunge them into ice or snow water containing a liberal supply of salt, or to immerse them in then submitting them to vigorous rubbing with a coarse towel or slapping with the hands to restore circulation. In many cases amputation has been found necessary where the patient has foolishly applied hot water.—Doctor in Kansas City Star.

Take your carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers and other employees of industries not "protected," and you will find them receiving much larger pay than they could get in Europe for the same class of service. Does protection protect these cases?—New York Herald.

California Climate and Weather.

Petaluma, Cal., May 7, 1888.

Ed. Register—We have but two marked seasons: summer and winter.
Summer is most intense from July to September, inclusive, and the severest winter months are December, January and February. Still there is not a day in summer which will prevent outdoor work and in winter no more than an ordinary overcoat is necessary for extra protection on the coldest days. In February, when we daily read of heavy snow storms, generally through the Eastern states, we are gathering roses in our gardens, and in summer, when we hear of sunstrokes on the other side of the rocks, our people are laboring in the harvest fields.

The rain season commences in November generally and
